

REMARKABLE DOCUMENT IS LATEST HANDBOOK BY GERMAN GOVERNMENT

(By Associated Press.)
CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Feb. 2.—An official handbook of German espionage, one of the most remarkable documents of the war, was produced as evidence in the course of the great Bergen spy case, which has just been ended in the courts with the conviction of six of the defendants.

The handbook was found in the safe of Herr Paasche, one of the employees of the so-called German information agency. Its title page bears the inscription, "Duties of the Espionage Service," and it contains, in the words of the court, "the objects and methods of the German information agency in Scandinavia."

The introduction says that important information can be obtained through the neutral or enemy ships which come to Scandinavian ports, regarding such points as minefields, minebelts, changes in lightships, etc. "By such information," it explains, "our U-boats can be shown not only safe routes, but also objects of attack."

The following is a summary of one chapter:

"Through shipping only can we get to know the enemy's guardships, where his ships are stationed, knowledge of his cruisers and other information. The best source is a ship captain, but they are difficult to obtain. The younger mates are easier to get, as their wages are not high. But if neither of these is available, the most likely person on a ship should be approached. Monthly payment of 50 to 600 kroner is available. Captains on English passenger routes are usually paid 500 kroner. Mates on neutral tramp steamers between England and France, 100 to 125 kroner."

"Much information can be gained from passengers also," says the handbook. The importance is shown of maintaining a good connection with representatives of the neutral press.

The hiring of commercial or other persons who travel in the enemy's country is suggested. "The best persons," says the handbook, "are commercial travelers who have been accustomed to travel for some firm, and who carry on an actual and continuous business. Just now also waiters, barbers, metal workers for shipyards and ammunition factories, as well as nurses, are much sought after in England. Women are especially recommended as good agents for obvious reasons."

The greatest danger is said to be in the sending of information. "But this," says the writer of the handbook, "is reduced to a minimum by our chemical agents in Germany, who have taken special interest in this, and have prepared means which, owing to inferiority of the enemy's chemical knowledge, he is unable to detect. The materials are given to agents in a form which attracts no attention."

One of these methods illustrated in the course of the trial was by means of handkerchiefs, on which the information was conveyed by means of invisible ink.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 2.—The United States naval reserve force, now embracing 68,000 men and 7,800 officers, "is larger than the regular navy when war was declared and three times as large as in the Spanish-American war," Secretary Daniels declared in addressing the special graduating class of 300 reserve officers at the naval academy here.

"This is a wonderful record of a service authorized eighteen months ago," the secretary continued, "and its creation has made possible many phases of the diversified work the navy has been called upon to do."

Mr. Daniels told the young officers, who have successfully completed the prescribed course, that when they left Annapolis they would find important assignments awaiting them and their achievements would depend upon themselves.

The idea of the Civil War, the secretary said, was contained in Benjamin Franklin's order to the navy's first captain, John Paul Jones, "to show at all times a tender regard for non-combatants."

"If you wish to find the difference in America's method of warfare and Germany's, it is embodied in Franklin's instructions to Jones," Mr. Daniels said, "for the American regards war as a tragedy."

Much of the secretary's address was taken up with a recital of the brilliant achievements of the American destroyer flotilla in the war and the bravery of American gun crews aboard merchantmen.

"Read the story of the Cassin," he said, "which, though struck by a torpedo and seriously crippled, refused to return to port as long as there appeared to be a chance of engaging the submarine. The whole country was thrilled by the account of the exploit of the Fanning and the Nicholson in destroying a German submarine and capturing its entire crew. The British admiralty, in commending officers and men, said: 'The whole affair reflects credit on the discipline and training of the United States' flotilla.'"

The first officer lost in the present conflict, Lieut. Clarence C. Thomas, after the Vacuum was sunk, cheered his freezing men as they were tossed about in an open boat far from land, and he at last perished from cold and exposure. After the Jacob Jones was sunk Lieut. (junior grade) S. F. Kalk, though weakened
